Health Nugget

In a recent study (ASCEND) a total of 15,480 participants who were diabetics, were randomized to receive aspirin or placebo. During a mean follow-up of 7.4 years, serious vascular events occurred in a significantly lower percentage of participants in the aspirin group than in the placebo group, but it also caused major bleeding events. The absolute benefits were largely counterbalanced by the bleeding hazard. Ref.: The New England Journal of Medicine October 18, 2018, pp1529-1539.
